

Q. You are acquainted with a certain class of diseases peculiar to females? A. Yes sir

Q. And you have treated them extensively
A. Just what.

Q. Now take the case of a certain lady whom you have known and have treated; Is it your conscientious opinion that had she remained under your hands that the treatment that you were giving her if continued, would have been of great advantage? A. My recollection is very indistinct in regard to the case you speak of; but my recollection, so far as it is definite enough to make any impression, is that I had but very little experience in the case you mention, not but 2 or 3 visits. Therefore I do not feel prepared to judge.

Q. Do you think that such a case might not have special treatment over there at the hospital? A. I have great doubts about the utility of it. If you had a female physician there I very much doubt whether you would get very much of it. I am quite sure that 9 out of 10 of all those cases you have alluded to here have been already treated
