

supper white bread, butter, cake, usually with fruit — sauce of some kind.

Q. What kind of sauce? A. Currents, — sauce of some kind or cheese, and tea. Then crackers and diet, as I mentioned before. These are always sent every meal. The mornings are about the same throughout week. Monday dinner is usually roast beef; depends a good deal upon the season; some times ham and some times pork, just as the season is. Usually vegetables of some kind; pudding, white bread, tea, and crackers and diet. Monday night we had warm corn cake, white bread, gingerbread, butter, crackers, diet, tea. Tuesday for dinner we usually had meat soup. I might say that we do not have regular diet for every week; we change as circumstances require. It is meat soup, white bread, bread or tapioca pudding baked, tea and diet.

Q. Do you have butter? A. Butter morning and night. Tuesday night white bread, butter, gingerbread, canned fruit or sauce of some kind, or some times codfish prepared with milk and butter stripped very fine and
