

actually necessary. I always considered it necessary to use strength to put a violent patient in the lodge.

Ques. Sometimes he will get hurt a little. Ans. He is liable to.

Ques. What do you judge to be a proper temperature in a sick room at night. Ans. From 65 to 75.

By Mr. Baker.

Ques. Did you hear some of the attendants from time to time use the word churning. Ans. Frequently. It used to be a very common expression; when there was a noisy patient someone might pass the remark that he wanted churning, or shaking up or something of that sort.

Ques. Do you remember the names of any of the attendants whom you have heard use it. Ans. I do not know as I can now.

Ques. You have heard it applied to what a noisy man deserved, not as to what was done with him. Ans. No sir.

Ques. Did you ever hear the word used in the presence of any officer. Ans. Never.

Ques. Did you ever hear Mr. Crowel use it. Ans. I do not recollect as I ever did.

Ques. Did you ever hear Mr. Ingherwell use it. Ans. I think I have; in about the same manner as I have