

building, which is from 24 to 28 gallons.

Mr. Pattangall:

Q. What has been the quality of the bread as compared with what would be eaten in the average families throughout the state?

A. I think it would compare very well with the exception of a short time last year when we were without a regular baker. We have a very nice baker at present.

Q. Whether the flour that has been used for the past 8 or 10 years is of a quality that ought to make good bread? A. I think it would make good bread. I am not a judge of the raw material myself.

Henry M. Barlow, recalled

By Mr. Larkin:

Q. I would like to inquire of you if as superintendent of the hospital you believe that the food that is fed out to your patients is suitable for their use in a general way? A. I do.

Q. In a particular way? A. It is good in all respects.

Q. Do you consider the quality of the bread good? A. I do.
