

the hospital; they always have plenty.

Ques. Whether the clothing of the patients is as neat as you can expect. Ans. I should say they were clothed full as well as the folks at home were willing to pay for.

Ques. What do you say as to the cleanliness and neatness with which their wants and the halls are attended to.

Ans. The rules are that they shall be perfectly neat; from the nature of the case they are not and cannot be. They make a very strong effort to look after it.

By Mr. Gall.

Ques. Did you and Mr. Sampson sit at the same table for 12 or 15 years. Ans. Yes sir.

Ques. Used to see him a great deal. Ans. Yes sir.

Ques. You got to be pretty intimate with him. Ans. Not particularly intimate with him. We were on good terms.

Ques. Would you not call him a friend of yours.

Ans. I should expect if anything came up that he would be my friend. We got along well, if he wanted assistance I helped him, if I wanted assistance he helped me.

Ques. This man who said the attendant was killing him, did you see anything done. Ans. I did not see it done, I took the patient's word for it; he said
